Time was running out after finding her father's lifeless body, she was smoking, drinking, and stealing, in trouble with the police and at school. The author describes how her own choices, driven by despair and the desire to escape her circumstances, led to a life of chaos and destruction.

Within the narrative, the author reflects on her own past, sharing insights into the challenges she faced and the pivotal moments that shaped her journey. Her story is one of resilience and redemption, highlighting the importance of second chances and the power of personal growth.

The text also delves into the role of foster care, examining the impact of her experiences in this setting. The author reflects on the role of her foster caregiver, who helped her navigate the complexities of growing up in a disrupted home. The caregiver's story is interwoven with reflections on the broader context of foster care, offering a nuanced portrayal of the system and its role in shaping the lives of children like herself.

Throughout the narrative, the author imparts a sense of hope and the transformative power of human connection. The story serves as both a personal testament and a call to action, encouraging readers to consider the role they can play in supporting children and families in need.

Award-winning writer and journalist Ian Brown presents an uncensored account of his sixty-first year, and his investigation of the many changes—physical, mental, and emotional—that come to all of us as we age. In this memoir, he also describes his day-to-day dramas as a husband, father, brother, son, and friend, and challenges the reader to think about his or her own life and how it may be changed by what he describes.

685961 HER: A Memoir. By Christa Parravani. Studies of twins have shown that when an identical twin dies, the surviving twin’s life is immediately at risk. Living without one’s mirror self can feel impossible, and then become so. This was the case for this author when her twin Cara died. Parravani’s account of being left one half of a whole is heart-wrenching and unforgettable.
