6959342 INSPECTOR LEWIS: Series 6. Widescreen. Three mysteries inspired by the Inspector Morse novels by Colin Dexter. Inspector Robert Lewis (Kevin Whately) and his partner, the enigmatic Detective Sergeant James Hathaway (Laurence Fox). Includes three episodes:
- "The Liar:" Two people are found murdered in their home. Assistant Chief Inspector Hathaway concludes that the two deaths were just the beginning of a series of four murders. Only two days later, a body is discovered in a separate location. Hathaway begins to suspect that the four deaths are connected; the clues lead him to a local pub, where the body of the fourth victim is found. When the police inform the local pub owner that he is a suspect, he is found dead. Hathaway then realizes that the pub owner was the victim of the maniac working at the pub and that the pub was the location of the final murder. The maniac had already killed the other victims and then killed himself.
- "The Last Enemy:" A woman is found to have been brutally attacked and murdered. The killer left a distinctive mark on her neck, but no clues other than these exist. The only suspect is an African-American student who was convicted of raping other women but who was just released from prison. Although he was released due to a legal technicality, the police believe he was innocent. While working on this case, Inspector Lewis is approached by a member of the council. The member claims a relative of hers has been killed, but she is uncertain how the relative died. The police are unable to solve the murder, and the suspect is finally released.
- "The End of the Affair:" A woman is found dead. The police are unable to solve the murder until a relative reveals that the relative was out of town at the time of the murder and that the relative is the one who committed the murder.
