2989808 A FIERCE GLORY: Antietam--The Desperate Battle That Saved Lincoln and Doomed Slavery. By Justin Martin. On September 17, 1862, a determined Mr. Lincoln was on the brink, facing a permanent split into two separate nations. America's very future hung on the outcome of a single battle, and the resulting revelations for this day. The Civil War was a war for a new country, too. Antietam is more relevant now than ever. 16 pages of photos. 318 pages. Da Capo. Pub. at $28.00 $6.95

3828649 MADNESS RULES THE HOUR: Charlotte, 1860 and the Mania for War. By Robert M. Barbour. Storied as how Charleston succumbed to a fever for war, and charts the contagion's relentless progress and bizarre turns. A portrait of a culture in crisis whose fever would lead to a vastly fractured Union and started the Civil War. Photos. 268 pages. PublicAffairs. Pub. at $27.00 $4.95

3891704 TROUBLED REFUGE: Struggling for Freedom in the Civil War. By Chandra Manning. In this riveting study, Manning looks at the escaped slaves who made refugee camps behind Union lines during the Civil War. These camps raised for the first time humanitarian questions about refugees in wartime and legal questions about civil and military authority, with results that still reverberate to this day. Given the deep divisions that still rive the nation, given what unites the people of this country, this work re-creates in vivid detail the crucial period in U.S. history when our young nation was almost destroyed. Fisher reveals the often little-known stories that occurred behind and between the battle lines, and debunks the myths that surround the era's greatest figures. Well-illustrated, many in color. 361 pages. Holt. Pub. at $35.00 $4.95

2970198 FAITH, HOPE AND RICE: Private Fred Cox’s Account of Captivity and the Death Railway. By Ellie Taylor. Taken prisoner by the Japanese at the fall of Singapore in February 1942, Cox spent the next three and a half years in a series of POW camps, notably in Thailand working on the aptly named Death Railway. Advised by the doctors to face his horrific experiences, he and his wife Joan spent the winter of 1946-47 getting his story down on paper, and this is the story that is presented here. Photos. 150 pages. Pen & Sword. Pub. at $39.95 $7.95

6634095 QUANTED SAFE OUT HERE: A Harrowing Tale of World War II. By George MacDonald Fraser. Fraser vividly recounts the nerve-racking frontline action he saw while serving as a major during WWII. Each of 30 stories begins with a ‘official’ German view of prisoners, to the grim reality of captivity, as experienced by the prisoners themselves. Dozens of original photographs from 1945 tell the story as seen through German eyes, but Chinner compares these to the personal accounts from former prisoners who describe the reality of being a prisoner of the Kaiser. 191 pages. Pen & Sword. Pub. at $39.95 $6.95

Historians will find this volume an indispensable reference, packed with first-hand information and the experience of the experts who bore the brunt of battle. The aircraft carrier Lexington was the second in line of the Lexington class of carriers, and the first American carrier to participate in combat. Lexington was launched on 2 May 1941, and commissioned on 18 September, the first of the Lexington class to enter service. Lexington was a relatively small carrier compared to most of the other ships of her era, but she was an excellent example of the type of ship that emerged at the end of the Great Depression and the beginning of World War II. The Lexington class was intended to be a fast carrier with a broad beam, providing a large amount of landing deck space for aircraft. The Lexington was a relatively fast carrier, capable of achieving speeds of up to 33 knots (61 km/h). She was armed with a main battery of four 5-inch (127 mm) guns, which could be used in a variety of configurations. The Lexington class was designed with a flush deck, which allowed for improved stability and handling. This design also reduced the amount of deck space required for housing the aircraft and their support equipment. The Lexington class was a significant improvement over the previous generation of aircraft carriers, which were often characterized by their large decks and exposed hangars. The Lexington class was able to provide a more secure environment for the aircraft and their crews. In addition to her main battery, the Lexington was armed with a secondary battery of eight 3-inch (76 mm) guns. She was also equipped with a variety of antiaircraft weapons, including 20 mm and 40 mm guns. The Lexington was a fast carrier with a good mix of offensive and defensive capabilities. She was able to operate a large number of aircraft, and her speed allowed her to maintain a high degree of maneuverability in battle. The Lexington was one of the most successful aircraft carriers of the war, sinking or damaging a number of enemy ships during her lifetime. She was lost during the Battle of the Philippine Sea on 23–26 May 1944. The Lexington class was a significant improvement over the previous generation of aircraft carriers, and it served as a model for the design of future carriers.
