★ 2778432 ROY BOY. By Walter Scott. Reproduction of the work first published in 1815. "A Tale of Two Cities" is an epic novel in which backbreaking physical exertion is undertaken for starvation wages. 404 pages. Dover. Paperbound. $7.95

The result is a classic account of the epidemic of bubonic plague—known as the Black Death. Defoe reconstructed events both historically and fictionally, incorporating realistic, memorable details. 186 pages. Dover. Paperbound.

Matthew of Paris, a monk at the Abbey of St. Albans, was the first to write about the Black Death. His account, a chronicle of events, is a valuable source of information about the plague. However, Matthew was not a medical expert, and his account is not always accurate. The Black Death was a major event in European history, and Matthew's account is a valuable source of information about the plague.
